PART I.—Proper and Tribal Names.

This pamphlet was first produced in January, 1933, in an attempt to introduce consistency amongst the various local Departments and offices in the spelling of Arab proper names and tribes, the spelling of which, it was noticed, had heretofore varied with the whim of each individual.

As far as the Residency Office is concerned it has, I think, served its purpose, and there is now greater uniformity in spelling than in the past, a uniformity which, as time goes on, should become even more general. I hope that this is the case in other offices.

The pamphlet has now been revised at the request of His Majesty's Government, to whom it has proved of some value in assisting the Police and Consular authorities to fill in the identification forms of those Arabs of South-West Arabia who find their way to the United Kingdom either as seamen or in some other form of employment.

M. C. LAKE, Lieut.-Colonel,
Political Secretary.

NOTES.

(a) Pronounced " tharab, thulm "—" th " as in English " the."
(b) Before a vowel at the beginning of a following word.
(c) According to local pronunciation.

1. The system aims at giving a close approximation to the local pronunciation.

2. The definite article ال can be written al or el, according to pronunciation, but is usually written al. It is only written with a capital at the beginning of a word, e.g., Al Qāhira, but " Tell al Kabīr." It is assimilated when so done in pronunciation, i.e. before d, dh, n, r, s, sh, t, th and z., e.g., Ash Shām, An Nūr

3. The numerous place names formed of two or more words are written with the words given separately, except in the case of common names whose combination has been sanctioned by common usage.

4. No hyphens are used, except when necessary for pronunciation to prevent confusion, e.g., Mis-hāl., Ahl Fat-hān, Mad-haji, etc.

5. The mark ¯ shown over the long vowels is optional, but should be used if there is danger of mispronunciation, e.g., Sālīm (to distinguish it from Salīm), Kamarān, Dhāl'a.

6. The inverted comma representing the Arabic letter ع ('ain) is essential, e.g., 'Ali, 'Aulaqi, etc.

PART II.—Place Names.

Since this pamphlet was first produced in January, 1933, several places in the Aden Protectorate have gained prominence. These have now been added, together with a few in the Yemen, and a few minor errors in the first edition have been corrected.

The Royal Geographical Society objected to the spelling of " JEBAL " as given in the first edition on the grounds that it introduced a third method of spelling the Arabic word for a " mountain " (as regards the second and fourth letters), and held the view that it should be either " JEBEL " or " JABAL." I have preferred the former for the reason given in paragraph 8 of the introductory note to the first edition.

The Royal Geographical Society also object to the use of the double " W " and double " Y," signifying the sign " TASHDĪD " which emphasizes the Arabic letters " WAU " and " YA ". They prefer the single letter to be written, the omission of the second or double letter being rectified by turning the preceding vowel either into a diphthong or into a long vowel with a mark over it, e.g., " SEIYID ", not " SAYYID "; " FŪWA ", not " FUWWA "; " SAIYĀNI ", not " SAYYĀNI," etc.

Should a map of the Aden Protectorate be produced from the aerial Surveys now being undertaken by the Royal Air Force, I hope that the spelling of names will be in accordance with the Royal Geographical Society II system, and that this pamphlet may, therefore, be of some assistance.

M. C. LAKE, Lieut.-Colonel,
Political Secretary.

INTRODUCTORY NOTE TO THE FIRST EDITION.

1. This pamphlet is issued unofficially for local use, to supplement the official lists of names in South-West Arabia issued by the Permanent Committee on Geographical Names, of which the first list was published by the Royal Geographical Society in December, 1931.

2. It is hoped that it may serve two purposes : firstly, to assist Officers, Officials and others travelling in South-West Arabia, or who have to deal with its inhabitants, to acquire the correct local pronunciation of places which they visit or to which they have to refer in conversation, and, secondly, to enable all places marked on existing maps of South-West Arabia, and all places not at present marked, to be given the correct transliteration in any new maps which may be made. Finally, it may prove of use to the Permanent Committee on Geographical Names who, perhaps, have to rely to a great extent on local knowledge for the correct Arabic spelling and local pronunciation of existing names, and for the recognition of new names.

3. In compiling this pamphlet, considerable care has been exercised in obtaining the correct Arabic spelling, for which I am indebted chiefly to the Head Interpreter, Khān Sāhib Muhammad Sālim, and it is hoped that the list is free from mistakes.

4. Only those place-names have been included which comprise towns and villages either of considerable size or which have figured in political matters or in questions connected with reconnaissances or the construction of landing grounds. Other names can be added as they gain prominence.

5. Presumably the chief object to be obtained in any form of transliteration is so to effect the transposition that there can be no possibility of an incorrect pronunciation. R.G.S. II System, therefore, aims at giving the correct local pronunciation.

6. In this connection, the following extracts from an introductory note by the Chairman of the P.C.G.N. to the first list of names in South-West Arabia are given :—

> " (a) In South-West Arabia, the diphthong ' fat-ha ya ' usually has a sound nearer to ' ei ' than to ' ai,' and the diphthong ' fat-ha wau ' a sound nearer to ' o ' than to ' au.' "
> " (b) In the transliteration of Arabic, the short vowels ' a ' and ' u ' have generally been preferred in this list to ' e ' and ' o,' except in a few conventional spellings (Aden, Sheikh 'Othman, Lahej, Yemen, etc.)."

In this pamphlet, " ei " and " o " have always been used in preference to " ai " and " au," e.g., " beit," not " bait," " Sheikh," not " Shaikh," " Luheiya," " Meifa," "Seihūt," etc. " Nobat," not " Naubat," " Lodar," not " Laudar," " Jof, Al," not "Jauf, Al," etc.

7. If an Officer travelling in the Aden Protectorate asked his way to " Laudar " (and pronounced it like the English word " louder "), he would run the risk of not being understood. It is like someone in England asking his way to Dowver instead of to Dover, or to Kymebridge instead of to Cambridge.

8. As regards the short vowel " a," it seems inconsistent with the principle laid down in R.G.S. II System, which emphasizes the necessity for correct local pronunciation, that " fat-ha ya " should always be represented by " a," except in conventional spellings, and if the local pronunciation approximates more to the sound of " e," " e " might be used rather than " a," e.g., " Jebel " (pronounced like English " Jebble "), not " Jabal " (pronounced like English " Jubble "). This has been carried out in this pamphlet.

9. Map references of names not at present marked on existing maps have been given vis-à-vis those names which are marked, but as the positions of many of the latter have not been accurately surveyed, particularly to the N.E. and N.N.E., the positions of the former also are consequently in many cases inaccurate. As regards column No. 12 in the Tribal Lists (Hadhramaut) it is confessed that there is some inconsistency. In an official Geographical Sense, Al Hadhramaut extends from Longitude 47° E. to the S.W. border of Dhufār, but for political and tribal purposes, it is taken only to include the area bounded by the W. Hajar on the West, and Wadi Hadhramaut (W. Masīla) on the North and East.

10. And whereas the 'Abdulwāhid Tribe, W. of Wādi Hajar has been tabulated separately, the names of places under the control of the Sultan of Qishn (and Socotra) have been tabulated under column No. 12, the reason being that there are so few of them of any importance that it has not been considered necessary to make a distinction.

11. The Arab definition of Al Hadhramaut is confined to the actual river-bed of the Wādi Hadhramaut, and only extends from Shibām to its mouth near Seihūt.

Political Officer.
